GIVEN FIVE YEARS FOR ASSAULT

Boyd Samuels was tried in Recorder's Court Tuesday and given five years on the roads for making an assault on two girls from near Star, Montgomery county. The girls reached here last week on the evening train and were in quest of a friend's house, expecting to get work in the Silk Mill, when Samuels approached them and offered to take them to their destination in his buggy. Instead he hunted the dark streets of the city but the girls soon showed him that they would not stand for his advances and were able to take care of themselves. Samuels took an appeal and the bond was fixed at $750.

HIGHER POSTAL RATES

On and after Friday, Nov. 2d, the new postal rates will be in effect. Three cents must be placed on all first-class letters leaving the city and 2c on all first-class mail in the city. All postal cards must carry two cents postage—that is one extra stamp besides the 1c stamp impressed on the postal cards. The people should observe the new law if they don't want their letters and postal cards help up indefinitely.

MUNICIPAL WOOD YARD

There is an extraordinary shortage of coal and wood in the city. The city should establish a municipal wood yard like Greensboro to protect the poor people who are only able to buy in small quantities.

MAKE 'EM LOWER PRICES

Notwithstanding the decline of wholesale prices the retail prices are going up, says Hoover, and he calls upon the housewives to bring pressure to pass upon the exorbitant prices the retail grocerymen are charging. Sugar should be selling at $2 a pound and flour at $10 to $10.70 a barrel and beef at a lower price than three months ago, says the food administrator.

A QUESTION OF LOYALTY AND PATRIOTISM

IF you are able (and it is said that over 90 per cent. of the manhood of America is) you should own one or more Liberty Bonds before the closing date, this Saturday night. Certainly you should want to, if you love your country. Think of your home and loved ones, think of the freedom you and yours enjoy, think of the big debt you owe your country and how little you have given in return. It matters not to you how many bonds are taken by others or whether or not the issue will be over-subscribed; the question with you is: "Have I done my bit for my country?" How can you escape such an obligation and feel like a real, true, red-blooded American? You can buy a bond by paying only one dollar a week if you so desire. Is there any excuse for not owning one? They are as safe as the very country you live in because they are backed by your country—America. If autocracy should prevail you would lose your all, anyway—hadn't you better help to make the world safe for democracy? The bonds pay 4 per cent. interest which with the present tax rate equals more than 6 per cent, because the bonds are free from all normal taxes. It is a far better plan than taxing you to pay the war debt, now isn't it? Any bank will be glad to take your subscription. You can sell your Liberty Bonds at par anytime and no doubt they will bring a good premium after the war, which we must win or lose our all.

THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS GAVE "THEIR ALL"

If the rural people had been reached with the proper kind of literature all along the success of the Liberty bonds would have been ensured long ago. There is much concern among these people because most of them have not thoroughly understood the situation. The weekly newspaper is the best medium in the world to reach this class and the government made a mistake when it failed to take advantage of the weekly press as a news purveyor for the Liberty bonds. Of course many of the weeklies contributed valuable space free for the success of the loan. In fact very few carried any ads. signed by one or more parties as patriotic contributors but the editors gave "their all" without one cent or without any expectation of reward except a deep sense of patriotic pride for their country.

THE PATHFINDERS COMING

The party will pass High Point Nov. 1st, in the afternoon.

THE PARADE YESTERDAY

The Liberty parade by the school children yesterday afternoon was an inspiring event. There were 2,000 in the parade, all carrying flags or banners. On some of the banners were "Down with the Kaiser," "Every time you buy a Liberty bond you make the Kaiser Cry," and similar catchy phrases. The parade should have its effect here in waking up some certain lukewarm individuals who are too stingy and selfish to breathe.

MOTORCYCLE RUNS INTO AUTO

Saturday night Connie Kinney ran his motorcycle into Dr. C. S. Grayson's automobile and aside from disfiguring the larger machine considerably it came near costing the life of young Kinney. It seems that Kinney and his brother were coming down Lake street towards Main at a terrific rate of speed when Dr. Grayson was turning his car around at the intersection of Lake and Main streets. The Kinneys evidently did not see the physician until too late, but Dr. Grayson took in the situation at once and stopped his car. Connie Kinney came headlong into the auto, his motorcycle striking the right fender and running board and his head plunged thru the quarter-plate glass on the side of the physician's closed roadster, landing on the inside with blood flowing from a dozen wounds. It was a miracle that Kinney escaped with his life. The jugular vein escaped by a narrow margin. Dr. Grayson carried the wounded man to his office and gave him attention and when he left the office his face and neck was swathed in bandages. The other Kinney boy escaped injury although his motorcycle crushed into the wreckage.

NOT MURDER, BUT—

Tuesday some little excitement was caused along the Davidson road near here when blood was found along the highway leading to the woods. The officers here were sent for and the information given that some one had been murdered and carried to the woods. But the cause of it all was. A horse had slipped, fell on its knee and received a bad wound from which the blood flowed freely. Soon after the horse fell a shot was heard, hunters had treed a squirrel. Then came along a party who jumped at conclusions and made a mountain out of a mole-hill.

A PLEASANT DAY IN THE COUNTRY

Sunday the editor and family, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. David Welborn, spent a most delightful day at the home of Mr. Sanford Welborn on Route 2, Thomasville. At this home lives Mr. and Mrs. Ed Welborn and two children, making up a most interesting family.

The dinner cooked and served by Mrs. Ed Welborn was one of the best the writer ever sat down to. There was no room for improvement—everything cooked and served to the queen's taste. It would not be exactly proper for us to enumerate the many good things on the table or fail to our party to tell "what we put away" for dinner, but it was enough to last over night, for there was absolutely no room left for even a late supper. However some were bold enough to top the meal off an hour or two after we made the great drive on eats with fine apple cider. After learning that Mrs. Welborn is a daughter of that former splendid Rockingham citizen, C. J. Matthews, a personal friend of the Stamey family when the late Rev. P. F. W. Stamey was stationed at Reidsville, we were not surprised at the excellent cooking and the open-hearted hospitality displayed.

The Welborn farm is an ideal one, our type of a farm and just such a place as would appeal to this newspaper man on which to find supreme enjoyment in the years to come, from the turmoil of the city and the high-powered drive for business in the world of competition. On just such a model farm one could be master of all he surveyed, with none to hinder or make afraid—only the Great I Am to be responsible to in the large measure of the term. If the sunshine and the rains were favorable to the sower's efforts bountiful crops would follow—if not no mortal man could be blamed and the teachings of the Holy Bible and the Christian faith would not allow a murmur or one word of discord at the inevitable.

A pretty homesite on a knoll, surrounded by fertile fields and valleys, the crystal waters of the restless creek, the orchards alive with juicy apples and pears, the pens swarming with pigs and hogs, the pastures with cows, the barns and granaries bulging with feedstuffs, the lots housing stacks of hay and straw, the fields ready to give up the yield of corn, other parts of the farm, covered with the green of the rye and clover, with the forthcoming of the wheat and the oats from the recent sowing, the usual supply of the American pet, the chicken and the priceless eggs of today—but why particularize further, already we have digressed partly from our subject.

Messrs Welborn, junior and senior, are practical farmers and are making good—doing their bit for American ascendancy by providing a bountiful crop of farm products.

There are 114 acres of the farm and about half of this is cultivated and besides Mr. Ed Welborn has rented 75 acres from a neighbor which he is sowing in wheat. He does not depend on the slow-going but ever sure horse or mule but has a traction engine which he uses for ploughing and other work on the farm which takes the place of four or five men and teams. He has running water in his home and other conveniences and comforts in a model country residence. We counted thirteen shoats and five big hogs on the place, eighteen porkers altogether. A modern tobacco casing house has been erected and the tobacco can be handled for the market at any time. The present home of the Welborns was erected 25 years ago and the builders were Cum Welch and Claud Welborn. It has lately been repaired and painted and looks good for another 25 years.

Mr. Sanford Welborn is well and favorably known by many High Pointers. There are two children, Messrs. Ed Welborn, who lives at the old home place with his father, and Gurney Welborn, who is in the postoffice department at Charlotte.

J. Elwood Cox has returned from Richmond, Ind., where he attended the five-year meeting of Friends.
